What is Buyback and Dip-Buy?

If a particular stock has low value, but has the potential to perform better in the future, companies will often announce a buyback of the stock in the open market.

This in turn increases the demand as the transactions starts to go up buying the stock, which ultimately will drive the pool to raise.

Holders of Minaret coin will gain several benefits. Minaret

As part of Dip-Buy process, contract takes care of buying back some of the coins automatically and burn them whenever a sell happens. It is similar to the current buy-back contract seen on the market with more advanced tweaking to buy dips automatically.

This is a unique concept to enable top notch profit for early adopters of Minaret (MINAR).

How?

Minaret coin collects 6% Buyback tax on each transaction and maintains it under the contract process.

Whenever a Sell happens, a fraction of the Buyback amount is used to automatically buy from the Liquidity Pool and burns those tokens, this is a fully automated process with rich high-end complex coding to make sure it happens in the blink of an eye.

What's different about Minaret Coin?

Following automated Liquidity pool Dip-buy feature, new value is added to the pool and the amount of the tokens are reduced via automatic burn process, which results in an increase in price, win-win!
